DISCOVERY WRITERS

'The Art of Writing'

Our Vision

To develop and encourage writing in a supportive and collaborative environment and to provide opportunities for writers to reflect upon, celebrate and articulate the diversity of our community.

The Journey so Far

Since 2007 we have devised local writing projects specifically to meet local community needs. Participants are drawn from all walks of life and share their stories and poems in a friendship afternoon. Many of these projects for emerging writers have benefited from the Council's Community Grants Program.

The group organises its own program and is grateful for the ongoing support provided by Council and their Library, Museum & Gallery.

The Here and Now

Discovery Writers meet 12.30-3.00 pm on the first Tuesday of the month (excluding January) in the Miles Franklin Room at Hurstville City Library.

A short business meeting precedes a workshop on a topic of interest. Writing exercises build skills and enhance awareness of current writing practices. Each month members are encouraged to share their stories, articles, poems and/or plays.

An annual membership fee of $25, which covers basic costs associated with group activities, is payable at the start of each writing year.

'The Art of Writing' is a gift to share.
